

SpringBrand Outreach Email Templates

One sequence per YC S2026 category, sent by Arsham (Marketing Director) with a short personal intro. Every sequence offers free starter credits plus a sample built for the company's needs, and makes the core point: calls cost under a cent, with no subscription. "One bill" is used only where replacing a stack of tools is the pitch (GTM builders, B2B SaaS, partners).

Sequence

Day 0: Email 1, the offer. Day 3: Follow-up 1 in the same thread, adding one new use case and repeating the offer. Day 7: Follow-up 2, the break-up email, which asks for a referral if they're not the right person.

Merge fields

{first_name} founder's first name · {company} · {tagline} the company's one-liner from the YC list · {target} who they sell to (category 4) or the incumbents they compete with (category 5). All fields are already filled for all 262 companies in the companion mail-merge CSV.

Writing rules

- Under ~110 words, readable on a phone between meetings.
- Open with a one-line personal intro from Arsham. Vary it by category so it never feels templated.
- Quote their YC one-liner right away: it shows the email isn't a blast.
- Name the specific GTM job the category struggles with, then show SpringBrand doing it.
- One offer only: a free sample built for them, plus starter credits.
- End on a question that can be answered in one word ("Which city?", "Want them?").
- No invented customers, numbers or partnerships. Tool names describe capability, not integrations.
- Send plain text from a real inbox. Test subject lines A and B on each category.

1. GTM & growth builders

Your product runs on GTM data. Use SpringBrand for your own pipeline, or call it inside your product.

Subject lines (A/B/C): the data behind {company} · {company} + SpringBrand · five data vendors, or one

Email 1 (day 0)

Hi {first_name},

Arsham here, marketing director at SpringBrand. I came across {company} in the S26 batch ("{tagline}") and had to reach out.

Products like yours run on data: leads, traffic, social signals, content. We put all of it behind one connection your agents can call. A typical call costs less than a cent, with no subscriptions, no contract with each data vendor, and everything on one bill.

I'd love to set you up with free starter credits and build a quick sample around a workflow you care about. Worth a look?

Follow-up 1 (day 3, same thread)

Hi {first_name},

Here's what I had in mind for {company}: 50 companies that match your ideal customer, with decision-maker contacts and a first-touch draft, all from one request.

If it's more useful as a product feature, I can show you the same thing running through the API instead.

Just reply "yes" and I'll send it over.

2. AI agent infra & devtools

Developer tools are won on X, Reddit and YouTube. Do your GTM research from inside the coding agent you already use.

Subject lines (A/B/C): who's talking about {company}'s space · GTM from inside Claude Code · your competitors' traffic, in your terminal

Email 1 (day 0)

Hi {first_name},

This is Arsham from SpringBrand. Congrats on S26! "{tagline}" is a sharp pitch.

Devtools get won on X, Reddit and YouTube, and most technical founders don't have time to keep up. SpringBrand plugs GTM tools straight into the agent you already code in, so you can ask Claude Code or Cursor who's talking about your category, where competitors get their traffic, or which AI teams fit your ideal customer.

Most calls cost less than a cent, and there's no subscription.

Can I send you a free sample of this week's conversations in your space, plus a competitor traffic breakdown?

Follow-up 1 (day 3, same thread)

Hi {first_name},

Quick follow-up: setup is one line (npx add-mcp https://connector.springbrand.ai/mcp), then you just ask your agent something like "Show me this week's Reddit threads about [your category], and where [competitor] gets its traffic."

Happy to run it for {company} first and send you the results. Want me to?

3. B2B / enterprise AI SaaS

You need pipeline after Demo Day, without paying for Apollo, Semrush and Similarweb separately.

Subject lines (A/B/C): 50 target accounts for {company} · pipeline after Demo Day · {company}'s next customers

Email 1 (day 0)

Hi {first_name},

Arsham from SpringBrand here. I saw {company} in the S26 batch ("{tagline}"). Really cool.

After Demo Day, most teams I talk to need pipeline fast but aren't ready to pay for separate lead, SEO and traffic tools. SpringBrand gives your AI agent all of them: find companies and decision-makers that fit, push them into HubSpot or Salesforce, and follow up on deals that went quiet.

It's pay as you go, usually under a cent per call, with everything on one bill.

Tell me your ideal customer in one line and I'll send you a free sample list. Sound good?

Follow-up 1 (day 3, same thread)

Hi {first_name},

One more thought: early B2B deals usually die from silence, not a "no." SpringBrand can spot deals that haven't moved in two weeks and draft the follow-ups for you.

The free sample list is still yours. Just reply with your ideal customer and I'll get it started.

4. Vertical AI for SMBs & local operators

Selling to small operators is a volume game. Build city-by-city lead lists and local content.

Subject lines (A/B/C): {company}'s first city · {company}'s next 500 leads · a lead list of {target}

Email 1 (day 0)

Hi {first_name},

I'm Arsham, marketing director at SpringBrand. {company} caught my eye in the S26 batch ("{tagline}").

Selling to {target} is a numbers game: long lists, local search and a lot of follow-up. Our AI tools do the heavy lifting. They build a list of {target} in any city with owner contacts, find the local keywords competitors rank for, and make short demo videos owners actually watch. Most calls cost less than a cent.

Pick a city and I'll send you a free list of {target} there, contacts included. Where should I start?

5. AI-native service firms

Incumbent firms own the search results. Show where they get their clients and which keywords you can take.

Subject lines (A/B/C): where {target} get their clients · keywords {company} can take · {company} vs. {target}

Email 1 (day 0)

Hi {first_name},

Arsham from SpringBrand here. I saw {company} in the S26 batch ("{tagline}") and loved the idea.

Winning clients from {target} often comes down to search. They've owned the keywords your future clients type for years. SpringBrand shows you exactly where they get their traffic and which keywords you can realistically win. At less than a cent per call, it's cheap to find out.

Can I send you a free breakdown for three {target} in your market?

7. Deep tech, hardware, defense & bio

You need GTM research in bursts. Pay for it only when you use it.

Subject lines (A/B/C): buyer research for {company} · a buyer list for {company} · research you only need twice a year

Email 1 (day 0)

Hi {first_name},

This is Arsham, marketing director at SpringBrand. I came across {company} in the S26 batch ("{tagline}"). Impressive work.

Deep-tech teams usually need GTM research in bursts: a buyer list before a pilot push, a competitor scan before a raise, a demo video for launch. Paying monthly for tools you use twice a quarter rarely makes sense. With SpringBrand you pay only when you use it, usually under a cent per call.
